

NEW CAREER HORIZONS

Some people want to be rocket scientists, or maybe movie stars, doctors or dancers. Our group of budding apprentices who visited us recently are looking for a career in food and production – and what better place to look for this than at one of the world’s leading producers of Fine Frozen Cuisine – Frankenberg.

Well known for not just quality, but for healthy and sustainably produced products, at Frankenberg we provide meals to many of the world’s leading airlines as well as to the hospitality industry and retail markets. Tucked away in a corner of Germany near Aachen right on the borders with Holland and Belgium, we are ideally situated for both access to food markets and for distribution throughout Europe.

A group of seven aspiring Chefs were given a tour and introduction to the facility by our Chef of Production Stefan Gleixner together with HR Manager Mrs Vonderstein and Chef de Cuisine Uwe Quiter and organised by Health & Safety Manager Andre Thomas. At Frankenberg we employ approximately 450 people from many cultures and offer a great insight into a modern and highly specialized arm of the food production industry. Our key customers are the most demanding and high profile leaders in the airline and retail business and a career with Frankenberg gives the opportunity to learn about different cuisines, authentic recipes and a variety of cultures.
